The Right to Work

You are invited to a free online chat about employment for people with an intellectual disability.

This will happen on Friday 16 June

It starts at 11am (Australian Eastern Standard Time) for one hour.

We will talk about why people with intellectual disability should be able to work in open employment.

Open employment means

- People with intellectual disability work with people without intellectual disability
- Everyone gets treated the same at work
- People get paid the same for doing the same job.

We will talk about why Australian Disability Enterprises need to change.

Australian Disability Enterprises are also called ADEs.

In ADEs, people

- People mostly work with other people without intellectual disability
- Get paid less money
- Do not get to do training

We will hear from advocates and people who have worked in ADEs.

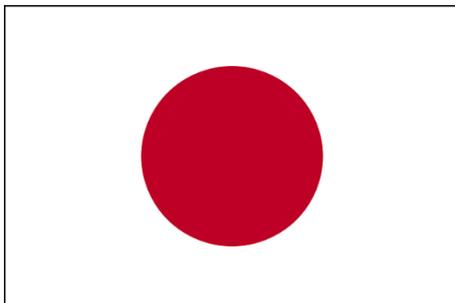

We will hear people with an intellectual disability who work in open employment.

We will hear from people who do research about rights at work.

Research is when we try to find out more about something.

We will also hear about how some people with intellectual disability work in Japan.
